

A WORD WITH MR. COFFIN.

During the absence of the editor of the APPEAL in San Francisco last week, the Tribune contained a paragraph to the effect that a Nevada journalist who had been offered $500 to secure a witness in the Stevenson will case who had seen the codicil to the will, had failed to deliver the goods.

Under ordinary circumstances the APPEAL never pays the slightest attention to anything appearing in the Tribune, and only does so now in order to show the real animus of the article.

The editor of the APPEAL was never offered $500 or any other sum to secure the witness alluded to. The article was inspired by Tremmor Coffin, and in replying we shall deal with Tremmor Coffin alone.

Some weeks ago the editor of the APPEAL received a letter from Mr. Chretien, a lawyer in San Francisco, in which he said that he had noticed dispatches in the papers relative to the Stevenson will case, and he wrote to state that he had seen the codicil which the plaintiffs claim was destroyed.

This letter was at once turned over to Ed Stevenson, and Mr. Louis Stevenson who was in San Francisco, was wired relative to its contents. Mr. Chretien stated to him that he had seen the codicil in dispute and was at once secured as a witness.

About a week afterwards Louis Stevenson called at the APPEAL office and stated that Tremmor Coffin was doing some jobbery in the case, and that he believed that dispatches to San Francisco had been tampered with.

The witness was then reported sick, and the editor of the APPEAL was asked to go down to San Francisco and ascertain if the witness was being tampered with by the other side. The writer calling at his house found him sick in bed, and after obtaining a responsible physician's certificate to that effect wired the plaintiffs, and forwarded the certificate.

The case was then moved to San Francisco to obtain his testimony, as his physician refused to allow him to go over the mountains.

The witness was placed on the stand and refused to testify, on the grounds that Tremmor Coffin and a detective of Morse's Agency had threatened a friend of his with exposure of a social scandal if he testified in the case. Coffin had also threatened his friend with exposure in the Wave and News Letter, which papers he claimed to control.

Coffin denied having called at the place mentioned, but refused to go on the stand and deny it, and when the witness shook his finger under his nose and charged the time and place, and also said he could produce witnesses to prove it, Coffin pale and agitated weakened and admitted having called on the party named.

It was a pitiful spectacle to see an attorney cornered as Coffin was. He had blustered about the Court room in Carson City, about the character of the witness, charging that he was a frequenter of Pauper Alley, and that he had letters from the Attorney-General of California denouncing him as a bad character. Knowing that he was bluffing, Mr. Woodburn wrote to Attorney-General Hart and received in reply a strong endorsement of the witness.

To refute the charge made by Coffin of his financial standing, he showed that his business for the past year averaged $600 per month.

The editor of the Wave utterly repudiates Coffin, and the matter has been placed in the hands of the authorities of San Francisco, who will see that the law against intimidating witnesses is properly enforced.

The plaintiffs also propose to see how telegraph wires are tampered with between this city and San Francisco.

The APPEAL does not care to bother with the Tribune as it washed its hands of it several years ago, but if Mr. Coffin wants to attack the editor of this paper let him shelve his sneaking tactics of bush-whacking and ambuscade and come to the front. We promise him a decidedly interesting engagement.
